President's Message

Religion, values, morality and ethics.

These were words that the nuns at St. Rose of Lima Catholic School taught me. I am not sure what they actually mean. Is this something like pornography? You recognize when you see them. My mother said you must live a life of values, morality and ethics before you can point your finger at someone else and try to make them follow your own rules. That's sort of like don't cast the first stone from the bible. I still like many of the teachings from the bible. I just wish people who don't believe the same as I do would try to understand my beliefs. I find many of the religions really are more interested in gaining and keeping power and therefore use religion to control their members and enrich themselves. I did learn from my father when someone uses God to push their point of view, ask yourself who will they benefit. So much for my rambling this month.

Cluster News

Forty adults and five children gathered for the Fifth Annual Cluster Picnic, hosted by Spirit of Life in Odessa. The usual fine buffet lunch was presented and there was much meeting and greeting of old and new friends. The play this year, presented by the WCC Players and written by Jeff Harper, was "It Could Happen Here".

Thanks are due all around, Jeff Harper, the WCC Players, Tobi Weisbond, site organizer; Diana Dichichio, purchasing agent; Melodic OLE son and Margie Hallmark, set up; and Rick Hamilton, chef!

The Holiday Service will be held December 10th at the Tarpon Springs Church; attendees are encouraged to bring finger food treats and socks and undies for the Migrant Program.

With thanks to Margaret Evans, the website is being updated. This is a major project, and we are indebted to Margaret for stepping up to the plate once again. Check it out at wcc.fluua@earthlink.net

Pines Update: November 2009

"Volunteer Mondays" have continued at the Pines Conference Center: recent efforts have focused on prepping the facility for this season's first "Exploritas" gathering (formerly "Elderhostle") which begins the week of November 15. Join us if you can, as we "Explore Florida's Ecosystems From the Water Up." A lazy canoe trip will be taken on three different rivers during the week, while we explore the history, biology, anthropology, archaeology, geology, literature, and folk music of natural Florida. The trip is designed to be enjoyed by all ages, whether younger than 8, older than 80, or any age in between. All the details of the week, meals, rooms, lectures, transportation to and from the rivers, and so on, are all included. Five additional Exploritas outings are scheduled between January and March. Check out the itinerary and contact-info in the break room, and join us if you can. The Pines has much to offer.
